

DENNIS DANIELSON

Dennis Danielson is a professor of English at the University of British Columbia (1986-present). He has a PhD in English from Stanford University and is known for his publications on Milton. Danielson is a life member of the Milton Society of America and an associate member of the American Astronomical Society.

Danielson was raised in Victoria, on Vancouver Island and attributes his love and study of philosophy and literature to the beautiful landscape and natural wonders of his surroundings. His other sources of inspiration include his composer wife, Janet Henshaw Danielson, and the writings of Milton.

After completing a BA in English from the University of Victoria and a MA in Intellectual History from the University of Sussex, Danielson completed a DPhil in English and Philosophy at Oxford University. He then went on to Stanford University for the PhD in English. Before obtaining his current position, Danielson taught at the University of Ottawa from 1979 to 1986. His career has been accentuated with visiting positions in Germany, Beijing and South Africa.

Dennis Danielson is the author of Milton's Good God: A Study in Literary Theodicy (1982), The First Copernican: Georg Joachim Rheticus and the Rise of the Copernican Revolution (2006) and the recently published Paradise Lost and the Cosmological Revolution (2014). He is editor of The Cambridge Companion to Milton (1999) and The Book of the Cosmos: Imagining the Universe from Heraclitus to Hawking (2000).